Comments: My earlier comments provides me a person of standing and therefore the opportunity to comment now. As a biologist who has field experience in Yellowstone and other national parks, my observation is always "what is the end result desired for the project?" That the buffalo (bison) is an American symbol is undeniable. The buffalo who reside in Yellowstone particularly as a remnant population of the original American buffalo. My question is: what do you hope to accomplish with these "plans"? If the goal is the eventual complete elimination of buffalo, you are certainly on track to do that. I am disappointed and dismayed that instead of implementing more protections, these plans offer the opposite. I urge you to re-examine what you are proposing and accomplish something you can be proud of.
