

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 9/10/2020 11:25:39 PM

First name: Wendy

Last name: Meyer

Organization:

Title:

Comments: This is a crazy idea. Building new roads will cost more than the sales of timber bring in, and roads cost more to maintain once they're built. Roads in previously roadless areas are one of the biggest reasons species go extinct, since habitats are broken into pieces. The Tongass holds something like 8% of the carbon in US forests--and that was before California, Washington and Oregon burned.

Who even wants to do this? In a barrage of unsustainable, planet-warming things that this administration has done, this stands out as one of the worst.

Please don't do it.