Comments: The Tongass is the largest intact temperate rainforest left on Earth and provides vital habitat for eagles, bears, wolves, salmon and countless other species. Logging the Tongass has been tremendously costly for taxpayers. A new report estimates that timber sales from the forest have cost taxpayers $1.7 billion over four decades. More clearcutting will damage the real drivers of southeast Alaska's economy: fish, wildlife and tourism.

This is a really bad idea. Can the government concentrate on the pandemic that has killed almost 200,000 Americans???? And leave Alaska alone.
