Comments: All the Tongass old growth must be off limits to logging. Preserving these ancient forests mitigates the warming damage of climate change. Any more logging in the Tongass must stop. The example of California is plain: since Hearst decimated the coastal Redwood forest range, our weather has changed for the worst. Every summer we burn up; the fall and winter months see less and less precipitation.

Do not exacerbate the climate warming trend by gutting the Tongass old growth.
