Comments: When a river is wild and free we need to protect it. There is not many left that remain this way. A place of joy and happiness for any human who is lucky enough to lay eyes on this pristine nature. A place of sanctuary for the animals that call this forest home. The river is home to endangered salmon and trout that are struggling to survive in many parts of the world. If we take away yet another one of there habitats the numbers and size of this beautiful fish will diminish even further. Not just for the wonderful recreation that this river and forest has to offer should we say no to this pit mine. But for the wildlife that calls this place home. It's been their home well before we laid eyes on it for the first time. We should not take it away from them.
