Comments: My family and I are heavy users of our local national forest trails, particularly in the Cibola national forest. I see people using pedal assist ebikes on local usfs trails already and I am 100% in favor. They are having a great time using the trails and many look unlikely to enjoy the trail system without assistance. These class 1 and 2 ebikes are no more disturbing to other trail users than a normal bike and have no discernable impact on the environment. They should be allowed everywhere a bicycle is allowed. Equestrian riders certainly have a higher trail impact both in terms of environmental damage and risk to other trail users.
