Comments: The use of ebike on national forest land should be confined to certain areas. this will allow other areas to be both free and safe from high speed silently approaching vehicles. think again if you think potential trail users are going to stop and read through some complicated list explaining how large of a ebike is allowed on a particular portion of a specific trail network. as to allowing use to people that otherwise would be unable to enjoy a trail, well... i dont think those riders are going to be doing single track, but would be happy to be allowed on roads that already allow motor vehicles. this is a motor vehicle. there are many incompatibilities with other users, most specifically stock, dogs, baby carriers. their speed and silence can be a deadly combination when coming down a hill and around a corner to find other users in the trail
