Comments: I don't believe that e-bikes should be brought into National Parks. National Parks are created for people to enjoy nature and connect with a simpler time. Our society is entirely consumed by technology and it is becoming more common in the simple everyday things we do such as buying a cup of coffee or communicating with people. Visiting a National Park allows one to remove themselves from those screens and breathe in the fresh air while looking at scenery they cannot find anywhere else. The introduction of e-bikes to National Parks takes away from the simplistic goal of connecting people with nature. If the goal is to go fast, try the newest technology, or be in a loud setting, then one can go to an amusement park. Providing new technology for people to try is not what National Parks are for. E-bikes should not be brought to National Parks, people should come to these incredible places to enjoy the scenery, listen to the wildlife around them, and connect with nature as well as each other.
