Comments: This proposed mine is at the headwaters of key spawning ground for innumerable endangered species. Instead of focusing on expanding the disruption and scope of this operation, our focus should be on rehabilitating the damage already done. I understand the importance and value of mining but a place such as stibnite is too important to the overall environmental health.

I have personally visited this site and stood witness to how badly the ball has already been dropped with this project to begin with, and I am so disappointed that there is even the opportunity for further damage.
