Comments: There is no need to allow any form of motorizations vehicles - can't there be at least a few natural places in America that stay as they are and are accessible on foot. Every time changes like the one wanted here are allowed they eventually ask for more and more leeway for more powerful motorized vehicles and things that just change the look and feel of the forests! All anyone has to do is take a good long look around forests all over our world and see the damages we've caused by implementing what seems like a very small change that consistently grows into changes no one is happy with and could've been stopped when it started. We are doomed to repeat these problems/issues if we don't look back at these failures.
