Comments: I oppose the Forest Service's proposed rule to open up National Forest lands to additional e-bike use. I believe people need to travel in the wilderness using their own energy, thus limiting infiltration of the land by humans. E-bikes are motorized vehicles and can travel up to 55 mph, allowing them to go further and deeper into wilderness areas, disturbing the wildlife that lives there.

Not everything should be available and accessible to spoiled humans. Animals need a place where they can be left undisturbed. We've already taken too much land away from them.
