Comments: As a hiker I am opposed to ebikes in national forests, national parks or state parks. Mountain bikers with no motors already tear up the trails, scare wild life and intimidate hikers. Just because something has been invented does not mean it has to be used in the woods or deserts. Ride on city streets or paths. If you are not physically capable of riding a bike without motorized assistance - stay home. As an older adult, I hope I will recognize when I am no longer physically able to hike and stop doing it - not expect the government to ruin the experience of others in the woods by allowing motors to intrude just for me.
