Comments: This should be very simple; Electronic "bikes" should be allowed and welcome anywhere any other motorized vehicles currently are. There is no legitimate basis for a distinction. To modify the Forest Service policy or management policies in any other manner would be a great disservice to our threatened and shrinking wild places, the flora and fauna struggling to survive there against human rampant population growth, and the legacy of proud people who have worked so hard to preserve the wilderness. There are more than ample roads, trails, double track etc which currently permit motorized vehicles. No need to sacrifice what is left in order to yield to economic pressure. For the sake of our and our children's future, we need to be smarter than the open market for new tech advancements.
