Comments: I feel deeply that we should continue to allow class 1 EMTB's and keep anything over class 1 off of traditional MTB trails. I have a Class 1, which is a bit heavier than the average full suspension MTB, but doesn't ruin the trails, anymore than the average MTB. I think that most folks with a class 1 use the "trail mode", which just allows you to go about the same speed as a non E bike in the first place. There's different modes, and like many things in life, it's up to the discretion of the rider to not go 20mph uphill and blow by other rides/cause conflict. Most EMTB riders are not trying to do that, and are respectful. Not to mention, most are older, and not "sending every run".
