

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 10/23/2020 12:11:51 AM

First name: Lance

Last name: McAdams

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I'm not a huge fan of the ebikes. especially on two way trails they increase the speed and likelihood of collisions - someone coming up a hill at 15-20mph on an ebike vs. someone coming up that same hill at 4-5mph is a huge difference. i think there should be some exceptions - i know a guy with a congenital leg atrophy issue (one leg is severely underdeveloped compared to the other) and the ebike lets him ride with us. but i really think that "healthy" and "normal" people should pedal. i just do. most of us need it. and it weeds out some of the excess traffic, and as i mentioned, makes it a bit safer. find a chair lift if you only want to do downhills. i've done some of that, and it's a blast, and there's a time and place for it. i certainly think that ebikes should ALWAYS be required to yield the right of way to "real" pedalers, regardless of whether traveling uphill or down.