Comments: I just returned today from a few days of hiking and camping in National Forest land not open to motorized vehicles. The quiet contributed so much to my experience. I could hear birds, even insects. Neither wildlife nor I were disturbed by unnatural sounds.

Few places are left with such serenity. Million of miles of roads and trails in public lands already are open to e-bikes. Their noise and their speed disrupt wildlife and endanger both wildlife and human visitors.

Please do not expand e-bikes access in National Forests. Much land is already open to riders if motorized vehicles. Protect some for those of us who walk, manually bike and horseback ride.
