Comments: I do not think the Forest Service regulations go far enough in restricting electric bike use on trails. Ebikes have a motor and are therefor motorized and their use should be designated as such. The ebike industry has done a slick job of getting them designated as not a motor vehicle, but lets face it they have a motor. How can you call them not motorized? If thats the case I would like to use my non-motorized electric dirt bike on non-motorized trails. There needs to be a clear dividing line between motorized use and non-motorized and that should be determined on whether or not the vehicle has a motor or not. Ebikes have a motor. An electric motor and that is undenyable. Ebikes should not be allowed on trails designated for non-motorized use without exception. Thanks for your consideration. Please don't play into the hands of those who want to increase ebike sales.
