Comments: I hope for absolutely no more bikes of any kind on our park trails unless there is a specified asphalt path for them to ride on and there's some type of divisional fence for the dirt path used for horses specifically. The mountain bikes by such great numbers have all but forced equestrians out of the parks, not to mention the great amount of damage they do the park trails during each season, and the damage they do to the park by all the illegal trails they create. They're rarely caught, because they're able to get away so easily. Whenever the park has built new trails, it's not long before those hew pristine trails are all bike rutted, dirt thrown off to where they become rocky, and the bikers climb the slopes of the trails and carve them up. Please if you're in doubt of any of this, take a long hike through Trione-Annadel Park, and you'll see all of it without looking hard. It's a mess! But, watch out for the bikers, because they may not be watching for you.
