Comments: Absolutely NO!!!! The cyclists are already a danger to hikers and horseback riders. They fly along trails at high enough speeds as it is--they don't need motors on top of that! They go on trails specifically marked no bikes. I have come off my horse once when my horse was spooked by a cyclist speeding along a "no bikes" trail, and almost came off another time when a cyclist came flying around a blind corner. If not for the brush, my horse and I would have gone off the ledge. There is no warning, unless they are ringing their bell (constantly) or have bells, and that is still not enough. NO, NO, NO, NO, NO. NO to motorized bikes of any kind. Never mind the damage to the trails from the grooves the wheels are putting into the trails :(Just NO!
