Comments: I don't think anyone should go further than their limitations. When I bike, I am mindful about it, because I know full well, I may have to hike it out if anything happens and I don't have what I need With me. I see an increase of SAR because of people that can't physically/mentally commit. I just seen a comment by a lady regarding this subject on Facebook and she blatantly said if she was allowed an ebike,She wouldn't be able to remember which direction she was going because she wouldn't be paying much attention to anything other than scenery and didn't think to look out for wildlife. She also couldn't hike very far or hike out if anything happened to the bike because she's obese. But would love the E bike to be able to see these things. Please don't ruin our beautiful, peaceful hiking experience by overcrowding with RUDE and uneducated people that aren't fit enough to hike. People NEED exercise to battle obesity,not shortcuts to encourage unfit behaviors! I'm not being mean, this is a safety issue! Are you prepared and have the funds to deal with the search and rescue increase from people not staying on trail? There are places I don't go,because I can't physically commit to it. I'm physically responsible,whereas most of tourists are not. ?????? THEY just GO, because "they can".
