Comments: Allowing access for motorized vehicles SHOULD ABSOLUTELY NOT BE ALLOWED. with new technology allowing for further reach into the wilderness this is a slippery slope that should not be infringed upon. This is one step closer to allowing "motorized" (although electric is still motorized) access to more and more areas. Humans have repeatedly proven that we lack basic human ethics, as seen with litter. To give easier access to a wider array of places there will be negative impacts on the terrain and wildlife due to trash. This will also negatively impact the wildlife that we are God ordained to preside over and care after. The infringement upon their range will not be healthy to populations of animals. In Idaho, Elk and Moose are already struggling enough, the impact of people infringing upon the wilderness will not be beneficial. We already have an expansive grasp upon the land and can get farther than ever on foot. And that's how it should stay. It will preserve our land and animals far better than if we conceded to the ridiculous proposal. This should not happen for the purposes of land management and wildlife populations. We need to restore our wilderness to the times when there was less human impact, rather than infringing more and more.
