Title: Steelhead Fishing Outfitter

Comments: Having been raised in and grown up in Adams and Valley counties, I understand the benefits mines like Stibnite can have on their communities. They offer jobs and can keep rural areas alive, like Yellow Pine and Warren. However, the risks associated with a project like Stibnite are far too high to make a project like Stibnite worth it.

The mine's location at the headwaters of the EF SF Salmon has too much potential to significantly impact not only the fishery in that the EF but also fisheries far down stream if something goes wrong. These fisheries also support communities. If a spill happens or something goes wrong there's potential to decimate these fisheries and there's no replacing the fish when they're gone.

The price of gold simply is not worth the cost of potentially losing a fishery that is so unique to our community.
