Comments: I have hiked on numerous trails that also allow bike riders and have had overwhelming positive experiences. Bike riders (except for a few), have been safety conscious and polite and have stopped for the hikers in their path.

Unfortunately, I was hiking on Stahlman Point a number of months ago, and was overtaken by a large group of folks on e-bikes. These were riders of all ages and it appeared, limited experience on these bikes. There are many narrow areas on the trail at Stahlman, with no way to " get out of the way" of a large group of e-bikers. The riders in point, came up a narrow part of the trail very close together and fast. A few of the riders had to make hard stops when they saw hikers on the trail, and I was concerned that some of them might fall over the edge of the trail.

I have obvious concerns about e-bikers sharing hiking trails, and would definitely be in favor of them having trails designated for e-bike use only.I really don't want to have to worry about being hit by a novice on an e-bike while hiking on established hiking trails. Thank you.
