Comments: Opening trail use to motorized biking is not a good idea in my opinion. This will give an immediate negative impact on the population of current and prospective Trail users. There are obvious reasons they seek out the motorless surroundings, and it is important to the emotional and overall wellness of people, as well as the wildlife. Some people thrive because of it. Removing that vital element of the natural trails allows immediate and future negative issues to take root. There will be less usage of trails, less physical and social, emotional and mental engagement and more societal laziness. It also removes the vital need for people to stay engaged physically and maintain healthy habits of physical fitness. I do not support removing the encouragement of slacking on it.
