Comments: Pedal assist ebikes should be allowed anywhere that regular bikes are allowed. Any bike can be miss-used on a trail, it's not the E bike that would be the problem but the rider. It might be more appropriate to institute speed limits and forbid the use of earbuds while riding to ensure cyclists are not running hikers off the trail or running over or into each other. For myself, and those that I know who used pedal assist bikes they are a huge asset in allowing us to ride when injury or other infirmity might keep us off the trails. Also, for myself, I find that having to pedal all the time to get the assistance I need to make it up certain features is a good training tool. I then try to continue to make it up those same features on the regular bike... Having experienced what it supposed to feel like and that it is possible makes me more likely to succeed. Please allow me to use either bike as needed on all the trails! Thank you!
