Comments: To whom it may concern,

The quiet of the forest trails are a haven for many people like me, that have anxiety. The sounds of the forest will encapsulate myself and my horse in a bubble of healing and peace. I'm afraid that peace will be shattered by the sound of electric vehicles, that my horse will be startled (putting me in danger) by the Sound of vehicles that have no place in the deep forest and back trails. Please don't pass this law, allowing motorized vehicles onto the trails that should be protected as wild places. 200 years ago, the US was a country that had thousands of miles of wild places, for animals to roam, and now 90% of that is farmland, or inhabited. The biodiversity and peace of wild lands are so decreased that we should protect them with all our might. So we can protect the diversity of animals that are left there.
