Comments: Please reconsider opening Trails to ebikes! In an avid mountain bonnets AND Equestrian. Although MOST trail users are well-intentioned, you risk unrecoverable trail damage with ebike access. In addition, it puts equestrians at great peril when mixed with motorized vehicles and ebikes pose an even bigger danger in that they are fast AND quiet. When an unexpected vehicle "sneaks" up on a horse, even the best-trained horses' fight or flight instinct kicks in. When a rider is thrown in these situations, the rider may be very far from help, now unable to reach help, and the horse may run for miles and get lost. Not worth the risk. Horses are used to seeing vehicles on roads and there is generally more space there to promote safe passing. Keep ebikes restricted to forest roads.
