Comments: First of all, the Forest Service should withdraw the proposal to open up American National Forest lands to additional e-bike use:

It is shocking to learn that there is now yet another vehicle which can and would threaten our forested lands - e-bikes are being developed that will travel up to 55 mph. Does it make sense that they should be used in forests? Put them on the expressway. More and more land, wildlife and likely some hikers will be seriously threatened by their use as proposed.

I find it difficult to understand the rationale for even proposing this abuse of our lands - which are already being abused by fires, polluted air and polluted water and in some areas - from overuse.

As a citizen and taxpayer I cannot stress enough how much I disagree with this action and I am sure if more Americans were aware of this, you would be hearing from them. But how do they find out? Are you proposing some public notices to ensure that the average person who may not, like me, keep account of wildlife and wildland information. Please advise. Thanks.
