Comments: I have attended a number of project presentations by the proponent for the Stibnite Gold Project, and so have become very familiar with the plans for this proposed development. My objective views are that the plans are sound and conform to current best practice in hard rock mining. Beyond this, the opportunity for development to occur in a manner that includes reparation of past environmental harm is one that the Federal Agencies should gladly welcome as this opportunity will therefore represent both responsible development that will bolster Idaho's economy and at the same time clean up compromised ecosystems while being protective of same within the new disturbances and affected areas.
