Comments: I'm from California and have had the chance to visit the SF a few times. Im simply in love with the area, the ruggedness, the beauty its the most pristine area in the U.S i have ever been. I love to think about how once the entire country was once like this area. As us Californians know all too well the gold rush has destroyed some pristine areas. Not to mention all the urban sprawl and logging has changed the landscape dramatically. If we let money dictate what happens to our lands, we won't have any more pristine wilderness left. Once its gone, it will be gone forever. Who will explain that to my grandchildren? What will I tell them? That greed is a human trait that is responsible? I'm afraid if this project goes forward I will have no other choice.

Thank you,
Chris Chandler
