Comments: As a member of a union working at a mine operated under a union I have found it is great to have a voice and a vote to the decisions being made that affect my job and life. It is a benefit to hold your employer to contract that you and your fellow employees have decided upon and any changes that are made is the majorities decision. Not that of a solitary individual that may not care about the employees thoughts and feelings. It brings a higher morale and unity among employees to be part of these big decisions. This is the first union job I've had a 43 years old and I will continue to work union until I retire.
