Comments: The area where the Ochoco horses range is familiar to me. I frequent their range and the expanse of the Ochoco National Forest because I am an avid trail runner. I spend a great deal of time running the trails and logging roads. The miles and miles I have covered is unknown but I see alot of cow manure and cattle tracks in the riparian areas throughout the watersheds in the Ochocos. I also see evidence of the cattle in the wilderness areas. Private business, cattle ranching, and their barbed wire does not belong on public lands! Considering removing publicly owned horses when you allow thousands of cattle to graze in the allotments is mind-blowing to me.

Remove the cattle then the impact of the horses can be measured accurately with unbiased science.
