Comments: I feel very strongly that the Bible camp on Mt. Graham should be reissued and made available to those who would like to use it. The amount of forest used at the camp and by the Columbine cabin and telescope is very, very minuscule compared to the rest of the available forest, and in no way does it limit or hurt the red squirrel. There is plenty of habitat for the squirrel. The Bible camp, cabins and telescope have nothing to do with the recent fire that destroyed so much forest, and should not be penalized in any way. Any other view is very biased and lacking in common sense. The cabins, and bible camp, have been there for many years and the squirrel has flourished around them. The lack of fire control in no way can be attributed to them. Reuben McBride
