Comments: To whom it may concern,

National forest is land that belongs to the public. Forcing recreational shooters into a small section of millions of acres of land limits how many people can enjoy the use of the land. Each shooter is responsible for making sure they are shooting in a safe area and for cleaning up after themselves. Those that fail to do so should be punished according to the law, but the rest of us should not be punished for the actions of the few. Look to Pawnee Grasslands for a workable compromise. An outdoor range was created and open to the public, but open lands are still available for shooting. Every time I take my kids there it's an opportunity to teach them responsible shooting and conservation of the land. We always pack out more than we packed in.

Thank you.
