Comments: I understand that some people like to shoot guns for sport, hunting, personal protection, or maybe to "just let off some steam". I grew up on a farm and hunted small game. However, in my opinion, Americans are a bit too into their guns and shooting. I know some will totally disagree. If people are going to shoot for target practice, etc., I do want them to have safe, legal places to do it far, far away from other forest users/recreators. But this type of recreation is not a priority the forest service should expend too much of your limited resources on. Thank you.
