Comments: As someone who property adjoins Pike National Forest I have a constant exposure to the noise and danger of the Harris Park shooting range. People have wandered behind my house and started shooting. Two fires that I know of have started there.

I am a veteran, gun owner and a former hunter (age and health keeps me doing so now). I know that some practice is necessary to retain your skill. The firing that I hear at Harris Park sounds more like practice for war than honing your hunting skills.

Until a real range(one with side berms, tables, routine monitoring and someone to keep it clean, target shooting should be prohibited in the forest.
