Comments: My husband and I have several times had to clear land in the general area. We got permission to burn. We would be told which day, what time to what time, and if we received a call we had to stop. It was a tedious procedure, but we followed instructions and finished the burns with no problem or excessive smoke. Our past experience living here for many years is the Forest Service seems to have a different set of rules. On occasion we could not see from one side of the road to the other. We support the need for a burn but hope it can be done with great care to avoid such experiences. Hopefully there is a way to contact project manager when this is happening. Smoke likes to settle in the valleys. good luck, it will be great when it's over.
