Comments: Establish sites on national forest lands either managed by a private company, CPW or the NFS. The ranges need to be supervised and follow standard shooting protocols and times. The ranges need to accommodate distances out to 1000 yards for rifles as that is a major reason why individuals go to the forests. Shooting of things other than paper or steel type targets should not be allowed for rifles or pistols. This may be paid for by some type of per use fee, annual registration, license, etc.

If formal ranges are established they need to have several lanes or sections,. May consider an online or phone reservation process that provide numbers that can be checked.

If none of this is acceptable consider a training or registration program for public land shooting. Individuals must be certified and have that certification on them when shooting in the forest. Shooting without certification or in violation of the rules can be fined or punished.

Shooting is a sport that needs to be supported and can possibly generate revenue.
