Comments: I think the basis of the plan is solid and will do a good job at mitigating the discussed pain points. My concern is that there are too few designated shooting areas or more importantly that they are too far from colorado springs. Most of the lavender areas and places I see people shooting are much closer to the city and easy to access. In order to prevent people from using undesignated locations the designated locations need a similiarly low barrier to entry. Some yahoo is more likely to only want to drive 20 min and risk getting yelled at instead of driving an hour to shoot at a designated spot. I suggest adding two more designated shooting locations much closer to the base of colorado springs. Since the close locations will most likely be the popular ones, having multiple sites would help disperse the crowds. I hike and bike all around the areas i'm thinking of, and I know that people will continue to shoot there even after this plan is in effect. I would feel much safer knowing that there is a safe place for those shooters to go and enjoy themselves so they would be less likely to put me in danger.
