Comments: I think this is a terrific idea and would be a great additional way for visitors to enjoy the ski area.

I have already heard rumblings as to whether or not this would disrupt the wildlife in the area.

I would remind my concerned friends that this is already a developed space which is used year-around by hikers, runners, downhill & cross country skiers, mountain bikers, diners, sightseers etc. Given all of this activity, I don't believe the addition of the coaster would be significant.

I think it is possible, and important, for the outdoors to be shared. Cibola National Forest covers more than 1.6 million acres. Making small portions of that accessible for human recreation increases enthusiasm, popular support, and (significantly) funding, that can ultimately be applied towards conservation so that our natural areas can survive for future generations.
