Comments: I am 4 generations running the same permit. The only difference is I am the first female in my family to take this in. I bought the family farm and permit almost 4 years ago and have fought every single day for a voice in agriculture. I run with 6 men on a permit that has not been ran the way it should be. Why have a on and off date when year you year the weather is different. I took a non-use last year because of the drought and was disappointed that numbers weren't cut for that year and the dates were still the same. I am a female so in a male dominated career I am the one that has to have the mind not to starve my cattle while others are damaging and giving the agriculture name a bad name in the eyes of those that have never done it. It is my opinion that we need to have better control of who says the on and off dates and that they change year to year. Then as a group you come with a plan to protect our way of life but also manage it for the next generation.
