Comments: Please manage public lands for the public, stop catering to corporate ranches. The Heber horses have been managing themselves for hundreds of years. The public wants the horses left alone, free and in the wild. Do not artificially reduce the herds by killing or removing horses, and provide protections for them, and consequence for anyone who harms them.
Apparently not all ranchers have a problem with the horses, a 2006 interview with Doy Reidhead, whose family is one of the oldest ranching families in the Heber area, Reidhead made the following statement: "My dad tells the story they used to run more wild horses in this country than they do everything put together now. And the wild horses wasn't hurtin' nothin'." The wild horses of the Heber Herd need to be left alone. They're not hurtin' nothin'.
Thank you.
