Comments: I've been using the public land for hobbies including atv riding, sight seeing, and target shooting for several years until the over population of the "wild horses". It's easily observable the damage and negative effects that cause to the habitat and other wild life. Due to the groups that "protect" the horses I rarely go in to the forest any more to avoid being falsely suspected of harming them. I would like to enjoy going out to the forest with my family and teach my kids about the wildlife and history there without harassment from the "protection" groups and seeing the damage caused by the "wild horses"
