Comments: I am all for the coaster to be located at the Sandia Ski Area. Having ridden similar mountain coasters located at both Purgatory and Glenwood Springs in Colorado, they are fun for all ages and types of people and can attract people who normally wouldn't even venture this far out of their homes. The coasters mentioned above are practically unobtrusive, especially when compared to the clear cut ski runs. They are not loud when compared to a traditional roller coaster, nor do they require swaths of trees to be cut down as would be necessary for a traditional roller coaster.
