Comments: To desecrate land sacred the Indigenous pueblo natives simply to build a, quite frankly, ridiculous isolated carnival ride attraction such as a roller coaster is deeply disrespectful and absolutely unneeded. It would be harmful to the natural beauty and ecosystem of the mountains and I've seen pictures of abandoned/closed roller coasters on other mountains, which are steel relic eyesores and solid evidence that solo roller coasters on mountaintops are an unrealistic business venture. As a citizen of Albuquerque who visits the Sandias frequently and considers the mountains a true gem of our state, I find this construction environmentally harmful, needless, and also an unsound business idea.

Sincerely,

Angela Spring
