Comments: The national forests are just no place for roller coasters. It has to be enough to enjoy America's natural beauty for its natural beauty. We don't need to add or argument it with "fun." It is fun, it's an escape, and it's so important to preserve. Especially considering the sacred nature of the land for the Pueblo people. I think this plan veers from the mission of the Forest service and should be abandoned. The Southwest is a sacred place, and we should be careful with it.
