Comments: Creating a rollercoaster in a mountain range sacred to Indigenous people of New Mexico will not only desecrate land that holds so much importance, but also disrupt the wildlife and ecosystems there. I would think the National Forest system would understand that enough to not value outdoor recreation over actual land conservation and stewardship. To build this roller coaster, this would categorically exclude development from an Environmental Assessment or Environmental Impact Statement, which are all under the protection of National Environmental Protection Act. This type of recreation would bring an increased amount of traffic to the park, and would have adverse environmental impacts to wildlife. Noise pollution, increased litter, uneducated tourists, and other forms of contamination would occur because of increased recreation. I urge the NFS to scratch this horrible idea and think of the significance and preservation of the Sandia Mountains.
