Comments: Absolutely not. If it's anything like the ART project, it'll be good money wasted on a poorly designed project that no one wanted in the first place. Never once have I thought while hiking in and around the Sandia range that there needed to be roller coaster. Not once.

Consider saving the money from this horrible idea, and also consider the money we threw away on ART and consider investing in true Albuquerque rapid transit; yeah, I'm talking monorail. If we're gonna blow money on insane projects, can we do it on one that doesn't make the entire city look like morons? Please. This idea suits Florida, you can take it all the way over there.
