Comments: What would be the long term management plans for this project? Such as through lifetime. From other maintenance requirements such as lifts have a record of poor maintenance. The cost of upkeep for these items has shown to be infeasible in New Mexico. The waste management from the grassroots project disrupts multi feet deep of soil, exposing employees to various hazards (the work alone is dangerous and could result in life changing injuries if an accident were to occur). The waste generated from land development, construction, and from the initial wave of people would result in increased litter/ other pollutants.

Lastly, it would not attract a large basis of customers. This would cater to the resident. With other larger and more well known amusement parks in our neighboring states this would not attract tourists. Sounds like a project that would close in 5 years and be abandoned.
