Comments: This doesn't make sense, a rollercoaster belongs at an amusement park. Part of what makes the Sandias so beautiful, especially as a hiker, is the mostly untouched nature. The slight humming from the tram is muffled by the wind, and the slow ascent/descent is still ok. The loudness and harsh movement of a rollercoaster goes against the beauty of the mountain. It's already bad enough that more construction keeps creeping up the mountain from Valley View Acres and the other neighborhoods, pretty soon there won't be any more mountain. Not to mention the religious significance to the natives. Pretty sure pretty sure a rollercoaster through a cemetery or a Christian church would cause an uproar. Also, I've seen what the space under rollercoasters look like, none of this makes any sense.
